

Inside Public Accounting

Weiner Named Chair and CEO of Marcum, Bukzin Named Vice Chair

June 21, 2017 by INSIDE Public Accounting

Jeffrey Weiner

The executive committee of New York-based Marcum (FY15 net revenue of $412.4 million) has named Jeffrey Weiner chair and CEO and David Bukzin vice chair.

Weiner previously served as MP, a position he had held since 1990. Bukzin held several titles, including PIC of Marcum's SEC services practice group. He will continue to lead the national SEC practice as well as the firm's New York office.

Other leadership titles at the office and service line management levels have also been changed.

David Bukzin

“All of these changes will help support Marcum's continued growth and better align the firm with others in the accounting industry,” Weiner says. “As Marcum has expanded into new geographies and service offerings and absorbed other firms with their own cultures, it has become more complex over time to maintain a clearly defined leadership system. These changes will simplify things and make it easier for clients and future partners to understand our structure.”

Under Weiner's leadership, Marcum has expanded from a one-office regional firm of 20 employees to a firm ranked among the largest in the United States.