

Long Island Business News

Peter Scavuzzo, Marcum's chief information officer, is among the firm's newest partners.

Marcum promotes 13 to partner

By: Claude Solnik September 5, 2017

Accounting and consulting firm Marcum LLP has promoted 13 associates to partner, including its chief information officer, who is based Long Island.

The Manhattan-based firm with large Melville operations announced the promotions on Tuesday, including the promotion of Peter Scavuzzo, an information technology specialist, in Melville, from associate to partner.

CEO Jeffrey Weiner called promoting associates to partner “an especially meaningful highlight of the year, because it speaks to the talent, dedication, and professionalism of Marcum’s associates.

The firm said Scavuzzo, who is also chief information officer, is “responsible for the strategic technology roadmap across all Marcum Group companies.”

Marcum credited him with playing “a key role in the firm’s expansion from two to 29 offices in the U.S. and abroad,” as well as integrating more than 30 mergers and acquisitions and expanding and relocating more than a dozen offices.

Scavuzzo earned his bachelor of science in computer engineering and master of science in telecommunication networks from Polytechnic University, now known as the the NYUTandon School of Engineering.

“The individuals we are welcoming to the partner ranks this year are an outstanding group of professionals who have served the interests of their clients and our firm with distinction,” Weiner added. “They will be an intrinsic part of Marcum’s future.”

The firm also promoted a dozen other associates to partner including Mary Anne Mascarenas Alino (New York City); Jana Aristizabal (Miami); Sougata Banerjee (Irvine, Calif); Barry Burchel (Deerfield, Il); Joanne Cristiano (New Haven, Conn.); Sunil Jain (San Francisco); Thomas Keane (Neptune, NJ); Kim Lowney and Lawrence Montgomery (Philadelphia); Daniel Roche (New York City); Lori Rock (Los Angeles); and Gary Rosen (New York City).